

A DISASTER AT THE MOVIES

The other day, I went with my friend to the movies. We stood in line to buy our tickets. Then we went into the theater lobby. We stood in that line to buy popcorn and drinks. My friend likes extra melted butter on her popcorn. She asked for the extra butter, and the server poured it on the popcorn. I asked for extra ice in my drink. After we bought our drinks and popcorn, we went to find our seats. Our seats were in Row H, on the left side of the theater. My friend went into Row H first; I followed her. Unfortunately, as I turned, my shoe caught on the edge of the rug, and I tripped going down the aisle. My drink sloshed sideways out of the container, on

down
how so
at
in
of
into up
to
for onto
with about
over
for
as

right onto a person sitting in Row G below us. It was cold and wet and sticky.

I lost my grip on my popcorn too, and it spilled onto the floor, the seats, and the people sitting nearby.

Several people jumped up.

The woman who had my ice cold drink sloshed on her back was irritated at first.

I said I was as sorry as I could be. I felt like crying.

When she saw how upset and sorry I was, she was nice about it.

After things calmed down, we enjoyed the movie. But my friend was so embarrassed, she may never agree to go out with me again.

on
down

how

so

at

in

of

into

up

to

for

onto

with

about

over

for

as